WILSON'S NEWSPAPER IDEAS MISUNDERSTOOD

CAUSED ERRONEOUS VIEW OF ADMINISTRATION.

Frank Cobb, Not Creel, Will Handle Peace Conference Publicity—No Censorship.

(By David Lawrence.)

Washington, Nov. 29.—(Copyright, N. Y. Evening Post.)—Publicity of the right kind used to help Theodore Roosevelt over rough places when he was president, just as publicity of the wrong kind is hurting the administration of President Wilson.

Impressions that are based upon erroneous inferences are permitted by Mr. Wilson to gain such wide currency that they are often accepted as fact, and no explanation or interpretation ever catches up with the original distortion.

Two cases in point have just come to light. Postmaster-General Hurst, it was alleged, took over the Atlantic cables last week for purposes of censorship, and at the same time the newspapers announced that George Creel would be the head of an official press mission to the peace conference.

Neither is true, yet taken together both things created widespread criticism. There was no connection between the two, and the administration could have presented convincing evidence of it by taking the public into its confidence.

As a matter of fact, the Atlantic cables were taken over by the government chiefly as a result of a long memorandum submitted by Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, who, on being asked what was the best solution of the congested situation of the cables.

Could Have Been Corrected.

If the administration had made public that fact a week ago, together with a detailed statement of the situation, an entirely different impression would have been created, for Mr. Vail is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as an authority on wires and cables.

Again, it has been widely circulated that George Creel would handle the news at the conference and censor messages.

The control of the cables has been linked up with the mission of Mr. Creel.

The truth is that Frank Cobb, editor of the New York World, who obtained leave of absence from that newspaper and accompanied Col. House to Versailles recently, will handle the publicity of the peace conference for the president, and there will be no censorship. Possibly consideration for Mr. Creel's feelings caused the confusion, for the things Mr. Creel has done in foreign propaganda and assisting the newspaper men in Washington deserve praise instead of condemnation, and it is known that many of the recommendations which would have helped toward better publicity were voted by the president himself.

Administration to Blame.

Indeed, Mr. Wilson's idea of what the function of newspapers is differs so radically from what most of the editors and correspondents believe the American people want to see printed about their government that the administration has itself to blame for the numerous impressions of an erroneous character which go out of Washington, because the president refuses to consider the activity of the press as representing the desire of the people for news, but simply the idle curiosity of individual reporters.

For instance, it may be surprising to the public to learn that the president has not received the Washington correspondents since May, 1916, and that in the last twelve months he has not given an audience to a single correspondent in Washington.

All of the men who have been interpreting the Wilson administration have, of course, had the benefit of occasional counsel with members of the cabinet, but even they were so frequent in their information that the president had in his mind that the great majority of writers who give the people a daily impression of what the government is doing went unguided.

Believe in Principles.

Many of the men who write from Washington have been and will be sympathetic to the Wilson administration because they believe that the principles enunciated by the president on human freedom and democracy, and many of the things which Mr. Wilson has advocated in foreign affairs, they have considered his weaknesses in domestic policy as secondary.

The time has come, however, when in handling so far reaching and important a thing as the settlement of a great war, a feeling of genuine regret is developing among friends of the president on the side that he is not taking the people sufficiently into his confidence, even on foreign policy.

Unfortunately, extreme criticism as for example an editorial by Colonel Roosevelt today, which the president could not help but see, as it was printed on the front page of the Washington Post, tends to solidify the friends of Mr. Wilson, and the president mistakes this enforced solidarity for enthusiastic support.

Some Absurd Criticisms.

The absurdity of some of the criticisms of Mr. Wilson's administration has done more to keep loyal friends of the president on his side than any other single factor.

Mr. Roosevelt today declares that the president has been officially repudiated in the last election, and should, therefore, not be considered by the allies as the representative of the American people, but only one branch of the American government.

Mr. Wilson's strength at the peace conference will be the support American will give him as he leaves our shores. Some of the men in the Senate Foreign Relations committee, democrats as well as republicans, to tell them what he has in mind for the peace conference.

The suggestion made by former President Taft, printed in a parallel column alongside Colonel Roosevelt's view, carries far more weight in administration quarters.

Mr. Taft declares the president owes it to the members of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, democrats as well as republicans, to tell them what he has in mind for the peace conference.

AMERICAN DAY IN LONDON

Thanksgiving Events Described in Detail by Press.

London, Nov. 29.—The Times devoted four columns to events and speeches of the American Thanksgiving day celebration.

Balfour, Curzon and Lord Ranksborough, representing the king, attended the official American service at St. Martin's, at which Gen. Biddle and Capt. Twining, U. S. N., read the lessons. Another impressive service was held in the Roman Catholic cathedral at Westminster, Lord Reading and Premier Borden of Canada, were the principal speakers at the American banquet in the evening.

Lord Reading and James M. Beck were the principal speakers at the Pilgrims' luncheon, which the Duke of Connaught presided. Mr. Beck made a notable speech.

Sir Eric Geddes entertained the American officers' club at night and particularly referred to their cooperation in the submarine campaign.

The American football game, the army vs. the navy, was minutely described, the game being novel to English football players.

Notable celebrations were held in Bristol, Liverpool, Queenstown and Southampton, through which 400,000 American troops have passed, and also in Winchester, where another American rest camp, through which 500,000 men have passed. Thanksgiving day probably will become a permanent British as well as American festival.

NOBEL PRIZE TO WILSON

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 29.—A special cable dispatch to the Normandin in this city from Christiania, indicates that the Nobel peace prize for 1918 may be awarded to President Wilson, who, according to the dispatch, probably will be invited to visit the Norwegian capital in order to accept personally the prize. The Danish and Swedish governments also are said to consider extending an invitation to the president.

HOOVER BUSY IN FRANCE.

Paris, Nov. 29.—On his arrival in Paris from London, Herbert Hoover, American food administrator, had conferences on the food problem with a committee of French experts and with Boret, French minister of agriculture. Mr. Hoover was accompanied to London, where he arrived several days ago from the United States, by Hugh S. Gibson, first secretary of the American embassy there.

COMMAND WORLD PEACE

England and America, Together, Able to Enforce Amity.

London, Nov. 29.—Sir R. L. Borden, Canadian premier, speaking at the annual thanksgiving day banquet of the American society, today approved of the plan to form a league of nations, but said that if the league did not materialize that England and America are able to command the peace of the world by acting together.

America's share in winning the war was praised by Viscount Chinda, Japanese ambassador to Great Britain. In a ringing address, the Earl of Reading declared that Great Britain would, in the future, join America in celebrating Thanksgiving day in memory of America's achievements in the war.

Other speakers were: Irwin B. Laughlin, secretary of the American embassy; Robert B. Skinner, American consul-general at London; the Belgian minister, the lord chancellor and Curtis Brown, president of the American club at London.
